

Card Spreads

There are so many different card spreads to choose from. You can pull a single card for guidance every day, or pull one for the week or even the whole year. As you get accustomed to using them, you may often have one particular card that seems to jump out of the deck! Look at it wisely because more often than not, it's meant for you or for the person you're reading for. I know people who even pull a card before a business meeting for extra advice and counsel. There are no limits to the use of the cards.

Here are a few of my suggestions for card spreads, but I'm sure that you'll find your favorite or make up your own style that feels right.

Single-Card Reading

While you're shuffling the deck, go ahead and ask a question. When you feel you're ready, pull one card from anywhere in the deck. Examine the one you've chosen and interpret its meaning. Then use your intuition as you look even deeper into all the elements of that card, such as the number, words, color, figures, images, symbols, and so on.

Three-Card Spread

This is a quick and easy way to see the past, as well as where you are right now in the present and what the possibilities are for the future.

Five-Card Spread

Using a five-card spread provides a more in-depth and detailed look at the present, past, and immediate future. In addition, you'll be able to glean insight on the distant past and far into the future.

Yearly Forecast

This is a great way to see the upcoming year so that you can plan ahead and make the proper adjustments where they're most needed.
